

Manuel Orozco is senior associate and director of remittances and development at the Inter-American Dialogue. He has theorized, conducted extensive research, policy analysis and advocacy on issues relating to global flows of remittances, and migration and development worldwide. His work has led to international policy initiatives leveraging these flows to build assets among families and migrants. Dr. Orozco is also chair of Central America and the Caribbean at the U.S. Foreign Service Institute at the U.S. Department of State. He also teaches at America, Georgetown and George Washington University. He has testified before Congress and has spoken before the United Nations. Orozco holds a Ph.D. in political science from the University of Texas at Austin, masters in public administration and Latin American studies, and a BA in international relations from the National University of Costa Rica.

Manuel Orozco has published widely on remittances, Latin America, globalization, democracy, migration, conflict in war torn societies, and minority politics. His publications include studies about the intersection between remittances and finances, financial literacy and development. He has analyzed and designed development strategies linked to remittances. His books include The Money in Between: On the global flow of remittances (forthcoming, Lynne Rienner 2011), Remittances: Global Opportunities for International Person-to-Person Money Transfers (London: Lafferty Group, 2005) and International Norms and Mobilization for Democracy (London: Ashgate Publishers, 2002). Other publications include the following, Remittance Recipients and the Present and Future of Micro-Entrepreneurship Activities in Cuba, (2011); A Commitment Amidst Shared Hardship: Haitian Transnational Migrants and Remittances, Journal of Black Studies, March 2011. "A Scorecard in the Market for Money Transfers: Trends in Competition in Latin America and the Caribbean (2010)." "Migration, Remittances and Assets in Bangladesh (2010). "Toward financial independence: Financial literacy for remittance senders and recipients" (June 2010), "Remittances and development: financial literacy in an international perspective," (May 2010), Remittances and Microfinance in Latin America and the Caribbean: Steps Forward on a Long Road Ahead, (September 2008), "Planting the seeds of financial inclusion: financial literacy for remittance recipients in Moldova (June 2008): "Making the Most of Family Remittances." Second Report of the Inter-American Dialogue Task Force on Remittances. May 2007; "Migrant Foreign Savings and Asset Accumulation." in Reducing Global Poverty: The Case for Asset Accumulation, edited by Caroline O.N. Moser. Washington, DC: Brookings, 2007; "Central American Diasporas and Hometown Associations." Diasporas and Development, edited by Barbara J. Merz, Lincoln C. Chen, and Peter F. Geithner. Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 2007; with Katy Jacob and Jennifer Tescher "Card-Based Remittances: A Closer Look at Supply and Demand." The Center for Financial Services Innovation, Chicago, IL: February 2007; "Global Remittances and the Law – A Review of Regional Trends and Regulatory Issues." in International Migration Law: Developing Paradigms and Key Challenges, edited by Ryszard Cholewinski, Richard Perruchoud and Euan Macdonald. Cambridge University Press: January 2007; "International Flows of Remittances: Cost, competition and financial access in Latin America and the Caribbean- toward an industry scorecard." Inter-American Development Bank: Washington DC, May 12, 2006; Remittances: Global opportunities for international person-to-person money transfers. London, VRL

Publishing Ltd 2005; “Markets and Financial Democracy: The Case for Remittance Transfers.” Journal of Payment Systems Law, Vol. 1 No. 2, March/April 2005, International Norms and Mobilization for Democracy London: Ashgate Publishers, 2002, The Remittance Marketplace: Prices, Policy and Financial Institutions Washington, Pew Hispanic Center, June 2004, “Mexican hometown associations and development opportunities”, in Journal of International Affairs, Spring 2004, vol. 57, no. 2. Worker remittances in international Scope March 2003, “Globalization and Migration” in Latin American Politics and Society Summer 2002, The Impact of Migration in the Caribbean and Central American Region FOCAL, Canada, 2003, “The marketplace of remittances and its changing dynamics” and “Latino Hometown Associations as Agents of Development in Latin America” in Sending Money Home: Hispanic Remittances and Community Development, De la Garza, Rodolfo, Lindsay Lowell. Rowman and Littlefield, 2002, “Boundary disputes in Central America” Pensamiento Propio July-December 2001, N. 14.

Jorge A. Sanguinety, a Ph.D. in Economics from City University of New York, is President and CEO of DevTech Systems, Inc., an international consulting firm he founded in 1984 dedicated to economic development technical assistance, with headquarters in the cities of Washington, D.C. and Miami, Florida. Born in Havana, Cuba, he worked as an economist for the Central Planning Board and the Department of the Sugar Industry. He settled with his family in New York City in 1967, where he worked for Merrill Lynch, the National Bureau of Economic Research and Manufacturers' Hanover Trust as a computer programmer and statistical analyst. In 1973 he earned a postdoctoral scholarship in Yale University where he taught economic problems of Latin America. Subsequently he was a research associate for the Brookings Institution in Washington, D.C. and later he joined the United Nations Development Programme in Rio de Janeiro co-directing a research project on education and economic development in ten Latin-American countries, while teaching economics of education at Catholic University of Rio de Janeiro. In 1978 he founded and directed the Latin American Program in Applied Economics at the American University in Washington, D.C. In 1990 he helps found and develop the Association for the Study of the Cuban Economy where he has served in two different periods as a member of the board of directors and is a regular paper contributor. He is also a frequent guest in radio and television programs and writes a column for Diario Las Americas every week. Many of his articles and essays on Cuba are available through Internet in www.cubafuturo.net. Dr. Sanguinety is the author of Cuba: The Present and Future of the Cuban Economy and Society (Cuba: Realidad y Destino, Presente y Futuro de la Economía y la Sociedad Cubanas), a book addressing the problems and possible solutions of a Cuban transition to a market economy and a democracy.

Irving Louis Horowitz is Hannah Arendt distinguished professor emeritus of sociology and political science at Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey. He is the author of The Long Night of Dark Intent: A Half Century of Cuban Communism, and co-editor, with Jaime Suchlicki of twelve editions of the “bible” of Cuban studies, Cuban Communism.

Jorge Luis Romeu is a Research Professor in Statistics and Operations Research with the Department of Mechanical and Aerospace Engineering at Syracuse University, where he teaches industrial statistics and quality engineering courses. He is also a Senior Science Advisor with Quanterion Solutions Inc. QSI, the lead team member operating the Reliability Information Analysis Center (RIAC). Romeu is also an independent Consultant, in industrial statistics and operations research. He was a State University of New York (SUNY) Associate Professor of Statistics and Computer Science. He retired Emeritus in December of 1998 after fourteen years with SUNY Cortland's Mathematics Department. Romeu was also (from 1982-1985 and 1998-2006) a Senior Research Engineer with the Illinois Institute of Technology Research Institute, IITRI. Holds MS and Ph.D. degrees in Operations Research from Syracuse University (1982 and 1991) and a Mathematical Statistics degree from the University of Havana, Cuba (1973). He is a Chartered Statistician Fellow of the Royal Statistical Society and of the Institute of Statisticians, a Senior Member of the American Society for Quality, a Full Member of the Operations Research Society of America and a member of the American Statistical Association, among other professional associations.